of the 332d Infantry of the 83d Division, which has been termed one of the finest of American regiments, and was selected for the double purpose of military achievement and moral stimulation at a time when both were needed on the Italian front. The regiment is credited with capturing 11,000 Austrians.

They came in on the Duca D'Aosta, which sailed from Genoa on March 29, and with them came their commander, Col. William Wallace, son of ex-Governor Wallace of Indiana and grandson of Gen. Lew Wallace. He wears the Order of St. Maurice and Philip and the British D. S. O.

The ship docked this morning at the foot of West 57th Street. It was greeted down the bay by a boatload of the Mayor's Committee and by many New York Italians who wanted to thank the soldiers for the help they had given Italy.

Gen. Emilio Guggioboni, military attaché at the Italian Embassy, with his aides, Consul Romolo Tritoni, and Lieut. Col. M. J. Serrati, were among the first to board the vessel after she docked. Col. Serrati consulted with Col. Wallace on plans for the presentation of a gold medal to the regiment on behalf of the citizens of New York. This will be done at a parade a week from to-day, when Italian officials and residents will join Americans in honoring the men.

By that time the entire regiment will be here. Thirty-five more officers and 1,548 men were due in port to-day on the Canope while the Dante Alighieri, due Wednesday or Thursday is bringing the rear guard of twenty-eight officers and 687 men.

The gold medal designed by the sculptor, U. Tietz, is to be presented in the name of the Italian people living in New York to Col. Wallace.

The gold medal has on its front a bas-relief picture of Italy bestowing the laurel upon Columbus, the latter wearing a helmet, with the Roman wolf suckling Romulus and Remus in the background. On the opposite side of the medal are the words:

"The Italians in New York to the glorious 332d Infantry Regiment in commemoration of the battles fought in Italy in 1918 for the noble ideals of liberty and democracy."

CHASED AUSTRIANS FOR DAYS WITH FEW CASUALTIES.

The 332d is composed of Ohio National Army men who trained at Camp Sherman. They sailed June 8, 1918, stopped in Liverpool, trained for five weeks back of the lines in France near Verdun, and were transferred to Italy on July 23.

On Oct. 1 they went up to the Piave front, where they formed a part of the British 10th army under the Earl of Cavan, which was a part of the 27th Italian Army under the Duke of Aosta.

It was not until Oct. 24 that they got into action, and then they took part in the famous pursuit of the Austrians. They were chasing Austrians until Nov. 2, when they achieved contact for two hours in the afternoon, with slight casualties on their side—one corporal killed, six men wounded. Later they lost sixty men by influenza.

After the armistice the regiment was scattered, performing difficult police duty, acting as a buffer between the Jugo-Slavs and the Italians. The first battalion was at Tre-vise, the second at Cattaro and the third at Plume.

The regiment was reassembled at Genoa on March 1, when it received the thanks of the King of Italy and a complimentary gold medal from the City of Genoa.

NEW YORK MEN ALSO HOME ON THE DUCA D'AOSTA.

The ship brought home a number of distinguished military officials and civilians. Lieut. Alfred B. Mackay, No. 20 East 58th Street, a Wall Street broker, was one passenger. He joined the first camp at Madison Barracks in May, 1917, served through the war, and since has investigated conditions in Serbia and Hungary. He said the food situation in Serbia was so bad that only the rich were properly fed. In Hungary, he said, there is more food than the outside world has been led to believe.

Lieut. Col. Philip Van Ingen, No. 125 East 1st Street, was a medical officer with the 331st Field Hospital, which accompanied the 332d Infantry to Italy. They had 350 patients at one time. Chaplain Charles L. O'Donnell was another passenger. He is a poet—a professor of poetry too—and he saw the collapse of Austria.

"We saw a great empire dissolve before our eyes," he said. "It was a tremendous thing to see. The Austrians only a little earlier had been rushing forward with the cry of 'Roma, Roma!' on their lips. And then we saw them, disarmed, coming back to prison camps. The Italians greeted them derisively with that old cry, differently shouted, 'Roma, Roma!'"

Twelve thousand soldiers were due home to-day on eight ships. Of these nearly 6,000 had arrived at noon on the Duca D'Aosta, Plattburg and Floridian and the Rochambeau. The Floridian from St. Nazaire brought detachments of the 346th Machine Gun Battalion, and the 352d Infantry and some casuals, a total of 1,824.

She was closely followed by the Rochambeau from Havre with 637 men in casual companies and 7 officers and 108 enlisted men of the Belgian Army who are to participate in the Victory Loan campaign.

Other ships due to-day are: Edward Luckenbach, part of 361st and 352d Infantry, 31st Division and 28th Mobile Ordnance Repair Shop, a total of 2,182 officers and men. Mexican, 2d and 3d Battalions of 361st Infantry, 31st Infantry, and three casual companies, a total of 2,082. Carillo, fifty-nine convalescent officers and men.
